About

Aamna is an international student from Pakistan pursuing her master's in Public Policy. She is from Karachi, the biggest metropolitan area in Pakistan and one of the most vibrant, diverse, and resilient cities in the world. Hence, her research interests include metropolitan planning and urban development through effective policies.

Notable memory

The winter trip to the South side of Chicago and our interaction with Homewood's Mayor Rich Hofield. We unfortunately missed a Metra train before it and had a funny encounter with the Mayor but after that we had a very productive discussion that taught me really valuable lessons about public service, the kind of stuff one may not find in books.
