

Borja Manuel González Morgado

Hometown

Madrid, Spain

Recent positions include:

Associate Planner, Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning

About

Borja is a recent graduate from the Sustainable Urban Development program. Originally from Madrid, Spain, he has a dual bachelor's degree in Business Administration and Management, and Tourism. In addition to his master's degree, Borja graduated with a certificate in Geographic Information System (GIS) and plans to use those skills for data collection, visual representation, and analysis of urban trends. His major research topics consist of economic development at a local level and community engagement through promoting cultural diversity. As an avid city biker, he is also committed to implementing sustainable transportation initiatives to enhance urban mobility - returning city streets to its residents.

Notable memory

At the Chaddick Institute for Metropolitan Development, Borja has provided support by, conducting policy and statistical analysis, and visually representing data through GIS. He has also co-authored several research papers about e-commerce, and presented the findings to numerous institutions and events, such as the Transportation Research Board in Washington, DC, or the Transportation Research Forum.