

Harrison Horst

Hometown

Chicago, IL

Recent positions include:

Community Data Analyst, IFF (CDFI)

About

Harrison's background in urban sociology and climate communication led him to a Climate Futures Fellowship in 2018, where he co-designed and produced the Shifting Climates podcast project. His primary research focuses on understanding the relationship between urban food systems and gentrification. As a Steans Graduate Fellow, Harrison works with the Wasted Food Action Alliance to develop asset mapping techniques and collaborations with other Illinois institutions, including the Illinois Institute of Technology, the Illinois EPA, and the city government.

Notable memory

I loved going to the Transportation Research Forum in St. Louis and connecting with alumni at other events, but my favorite Chaddick memories are the times spent walking around Chicago with Professor Schwieterman and learning so much about different parts of the city