About

Haley Cannon is a Project Manager in Equitable Planning at Greenprint Partners and primarily works with community partners and landowners in Philadelphia to get the most good out of their green infrastructure through the city's Stormwater Grants Program. She comes to Greenprint from Neighborhood Housing Services (NHS) of Chicago's Redevelopment Corporation where she worked for four years supporting Chicago neighborhood revitalization efforts through vacant property stabilization and occupied property preservation by working closely with the city and other local community stakeholders in programs like the Troubled Building Initiative and the Micro Market Recovery Program.

Notable memory

Haley was a Graduate Assistant at Chaddick while obtaining a Masters in Sustainable Urban Development at DePaul where she helped coordinate community urban design charrettes and forums hosted by Chaddick. She also worked on the annual Municipal Design Competition which identified bike trails for economic development that year. Haley led a team of graduate students that developed, implemented, and presented a research study comparing ride share and transit travel times and costs in the Chicago region to the public, and also helped develop an educational brochure with Chaddick's partner, Municipal Design Review Network (MDRN).
