Hometown

Wheaton, Maryland

Recent positions include:

Instructor and Graduate Research Fellow, University of Maryland

About

After graduating from DePaul, I moved to the Washington, DC area where I consulted for and did research on behalf of several organizations. Currently, I am a PhD Candidate at the UMD iSchool focusing on sociotechnical cybersecurity and public policy while also doing research in the areas of cognitive security and emerging technology. In addition to this, I also teach data analytics and have twice received the College's Student's Choice Teacher Award.

Notable memory

One of my favorite memories as a Chaddick Scholar was during the Belgium study abroad trip, when Joe would tell us all about the various train stations we took while going between Brussels and Leuven, as well as connecting with Belgian local government and nonprofit leaders, which gave a nice comparison to the Chaddick experiences we had back in the US.
