

If you worked in the Soviet Union you earned the right to annual "rest," which often took the form of an expense paid trip to a sanatorium. Something more than a spa or wellness retreat, the Soviet sanatorium attempted both to improve the individual holistically, promoting mental and physical health, and also to build a better society. This was recreation in a Platonic sense of the word—a three-week stay in a model society.

Experiencing cultural dysphoria?

Then join us in welcoming

Professor William Nickell
Dept. of Slavic Languages & Literatures
University of Chicago

For a night of Soviet-sanctioned recreation in Lincoln Park: a lecture that will include an interactive, participatory, multimedia, "all expenses paid" evening of treatment for the audience, including the dispensing of medicinal waters, agitational gymnastics, electrotherapy, and cultural education.

A NIGHT IN THE SOVIET SANATORIUM

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23RD

6:00 - 8:00 P.M.

DEPAUL STUDENT CENTER, 314

2250 N. SHEFFIELD AVE.

CHICAGO

