

Umby is looking for an enthusiastic intern to be our Director of Partnerships and support the CEO on key aspects of this new social enterprise!

The internship will include the following tasks:

- Research and select partner organizations around the world to help distribute microinsurance to families in need;
- Develop criteria for selecting and evaluating current and future microinsurance partners; and,
- Research product and implementation strategies across microinsurance to understand the landscape and opportunities

This internship is an opportunity to be involved in an exciting social enterprise startup and see the organization develop from the beginning. Our intern will be a part of the management team and will help craft the path forward.

Umby is leading a movement for bringing microinsurance to the world and we are looking for an intern to be a part of this journey!

What is Umby?

A one-of-a-kind designer umbrella company where each umbrella supports insurance for a family in need and protects them from their next 'rainy day'

Our Challenge

"The poorest citizens of the poorest countries are typically exposed to the greatest risks. Earthquakes, floods, drought, disease, crime all tend to hit the poor hardest. Vulnerability and poverty go hand in hand, but microinsurance holds out the promise of breaking a part of that cycle that ties them together"

- Jonathan Morduck, development economist

The Microinsurance Solution

The issue of vulnerability is solvable: microinsurance offers a safety net to protect families from unexpected situations. Microinsurance can break the poverty cycle and change the world we live in. Umby is leading a movement to bring awareness and action to the cause of microinsurance. Through a first-of-its-kind peer-to-peer online platform, individuals will be able to directly support microinsurance policies for families.

The Umby Difference

Each Umby supports insurance for a low-income family and protects them from health and weather risks for one year. Umby offers a ray of hope, comfort and protection for a family as they weather life's inevitable storms.

Umby is making the world safer, happier and sunnier: one yellow umbrella at a time!
