Editors-in-Chief: Julie Moody-Freeman and Jennifer Ogwumike
Copy Editors: Juelle Daley, Kathryn Douglas, and Jessica Williams
Final Copy Editor: Dr. Lori Pierce
Cover artist: Kyle Gabb
Mission and Purpose

The Center for Black Diaspora supports the production of scholastic, collaborative, cultural and creative work related to the experiences of peoples of African descent worldwide. The Center provides space for scholars from diverse disciplines to share their expressive and intellectual work and also to critically examine issues.

We encourage the study of the Black diaspora, as well as comparative perspectives to illuminate the particular experiences of African people both on the continent and in the diaspora.
Message from the Director

Dr. Julie Moody-Freeman

I spent my second year as director developing and planning initiatives that achieve the Center for Black Diaspora’s mission to promote and support the production of scholarly, cultural and creative work related to the experiences of peoples of African descent throughout the world. All of this was done remotely because the 2020-2021 academic year continued to be a tumultuous one plagued by a pandemic, by attacks on Blacks, Latinx, Asians, immigrants, LGBTQ and trans women, and on voting rights, and democracy, as we know it.

I did not want the pandemic, which quarantined us, to limit the Center’s engagement with our DePaul, Chicago, national, and global communities. Therefore, I developed and supported a number of virtual initiatives.

2020-2021 CBD Initiatives:

I took a multi-prong approach to achieving the Center’s goals this year by developing several initiatives. The first group of initiatives addressed the intellectual development of current students and alumni.

The DePaul Diversity Connections Program and Students of Color Program were two important collaborative initiatives that the Center helped to develop, organize, and deliver. Young scholars accepted to DePaul were impacted by a pandemic that limited their opportunity to visit campus and learn about the resources available to them. Recognizing this, these two programs were developed by a collaborative group that included: the Center for Black Diaspora Studies; the Center for Latino Research; the Dean’s Office in Liberal Arts and Social Sciences (LAS); the Admissions Office; Chairs and Center directors from the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies (ABD), Latino and Latin American Studies (LST), and Global Asian Studies (AAS). Two virtual events were held on July 31 and August 8, 2020 to introduce students of color admitted to the College of LAS to the college, faculty, current students, and alumni of color as well as to the Financial Aid office and the Office of Multicultural Student Success. The Center for Black Diaspora collaborated with the Center for Latino Research a third time to hold a virtual event on March 12, 2021 for students admitted to DePaul College of LAS.

The Racial Equity Graduate Student Research Fellowship was another initiative developed. The Center for Black Diaspora and the Steans Center teamed up to provide Black graduate students with fellowship opportunities meant to produce scholarship that advocates for racial equality, to find solutions to police violence, and to create policies to counter systematic racism. I collaborated with Barbara Smith Weaver and Howard Rosing from the Steans Center on developing the Steans/CBD Racial Equity Fellowship. We chose Laronda Wilson and Kimberly Fair as the 2020-2021 fellows.

The Emerging Scholars and Creative Series was developed to provide a forum for DePaul graduate students and alumni as well as scholars and creatives in graduate programs across the United States to showcase their academic research, film, and art. The Center for Black Diaspora, the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies, and the Women’s Center collaborated on this new series, which debuted in Spring 2021. Five scholars, artists, and filmmakers presented in the series: Sara Scriven, DePaul alumni and graduate student at the University of Maryland, Jennifer Gardner, DePaul alumni and graduate student at Temple University, Maiya Sinclair, DePaul alumni, Zakkiyyah Najeebah Dumas-O’Neal, graduate student at the University of Chicago, and Ifejie Akinyela, graduate student at UCLA.

The Healing Justice Dialogue Series was the second group of initiatives. It was developed to support the intellectual, spiritual, and health development of DePaul students, faculty, and activists. The Healing Justice Dialogue Series was a collaboration among the Center for Black Diaspora, the Center for Community Health Equity, the Women’s Center, and Peace, Justice and Conflict Studies. As a group, we created environments to support dialogue that addresses structural racism and violence and created communities that support healing and restorative justice. Throughout the year, we held several Support Circles for DePaul students and faculty, events on Healing Justice and Abolitionist Feminism and on Restorative Justice. The collaborative received two grants to support the expansion of the series: a Community Trust grant for the 2020-2021 academic year and a Vincentian Endowment Grant for the 2021-2022 academic year. Thanks to my sister colleagues and co-organizers: Ann Russo, Maria Ferrera, and Susana Martinez. Please follow the Healing Justice Dialogue Series on Twitter and Instagram @justicedialogue.

The Black Diaspora Short Film Festival and the Black Romance Podcast comprised the third set of initiatives, which expanded the Center’s work into the national and international arena. The Black Diaspora Short Film Festival was developed and led by Juelle Daley, the Assistant Director of the Center for Black Diaspora. The purpose of this festival was to showcase short films from developing filmmakers across the globe. Over 100 Black filmmakers from Africa, Europe, the Caribbean, and the United States submitted films that were judged in four categories: Animation; Narrative; Experimental; Documentary; and Cinematography. Winners and selected filmmakers participated in five events where they screened and discussed their films. The festival concluded with a much-needed discussion on film distribution for independent filmmakers. Thanks to the jurors and event moderators Juelle Daley, Camille DeBose, Ramone Hulet, and Raphael Nash. Film trailers and event recordings can be viewed on the Center for Black Diaspora’s YouTube page.

I created, produced, edited, and hosted the Black Romance Podcast, which is an ongoing oral history project about Black romance publishing. One part of this project involved producing the Black Romance Podcast, a public history scholarship, broadcasted on Apple, Spotify, and other podcast platforms, which, based on Apple analytics, allows it to be accessed in the Caribbean, the United Kingdom, France, and the United States. In season one of the podcast, which began in August 2020, I published eleven episodes featuring interviews with Black writers and editors in the romance industry. In season two of the podcast, which began in May 2021, I have released ten podcasts and will continue to release one interview every week throughout July and August 2021. Thanks to Juelle Daley and Randall Spriggs, Sound Editors for the podcast. Podcast episodes can be accessed on Apple Podcasts and on the Center for Black Diaspora’s website.

The second part of this Center project is focused on academic articles on Black Romance, which will be published in a special issue of the peer reviewed Journal of Popular Romance Studies. The co-edited special issue produced by myself and Dr. Margo Hendricks, Professor Emerita of English Literature at the University of California, Santa Cruz, is expected to be published in Fall 2021. Thanks to Jennifer Ogwumike and Jessica Williams, who helped to transcribe interviews, research, and co-produce (with myself and Margo Hendricks) a resource bibliography to be published in the special issue.

In addition to these initiatives discussed above, the Center continued to offer robust programming with a number of additional events on: art, Black Feminism, abolition, Pathways to Justice and Police Accountability, and an event dedicated to Being Black and Queer, which was developed, organized, and moderated by Jessica Williams and introduced by Mycall Akeem Riley, director of the LGBTQIA+ Resource Center.

I look forward to an exciting and productive 2021-2022 academic year. The Center for Black Diaspora has much more to come. Peace and best wishes to everyone!

Walk Good. Julie E. Moody-Fréeman
Julie E. Moody-Fréeman, Ph. D.
Director of the Center for Black Diaspora
Associate Professor, Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies
Message from the Assistant Director

Juelle Daley

This marks my thirteenth year as Assistant Director at the Center for Black Diaspora at DePaul University and it has been an enriching experience to work with my DePaul colleagues to mentor students and to fulfill our mission to cultivate scholarship and to diffuse knowledge about the Black experience in the United States and around the globe.

2020 and the onslaught of the pandemic, COVID-19, had an indelible impact on a planetary level and demanded that we too, needed to adapt and to remain resilient. The Center for Black Diaspora prides itself in developing in-person public programming for students, faculty, staff and the general Chicagoland community. However, this year, the Center quickly pivoted from its modus operandi towards an entirely virtual programming format. Still, the pandemic provided new opportunities and an urgency to collectively reflect more intently on what we most valued and in what way our actions could have lasting impact on the university community and most importantly on our students at DePaul.

The first change born during the pandemic was a new capacity to reach audiences beyond Chicago and to engage directly with event attendees nationally and internationally. As a result, the Center for Black Diaspora experienced increased visibility and attendance as many tuned-in via Zoom. As with many cultural institutions during the pandemic, we hope to retain this ‘expansiveness’ long after the pandemic.

Second, this period allowed for innovation and new initiatives and as such, I spearheaded the creation of a virtual film festival, the Black Diaspora Short Film Festival to spotlight the Center’s rich film collection on Black Cinema housed at the Center at our Lincoln Park campus. In doing so, we were able to celebrate, discover and expose emerging Black filmmakers. We hosted film screenings in the categories of Cinematography, Narrative, Experimental, Animation and Documentary and a panel on Black Film Distribution.

Lastly, the Center was able to co-organize events with Chicagoland cultural stakeholders like the Chicago Artists Coalition in an attempt to intensify ties to cultural institutions in the city. I am grateful to have played a role in this regard as well as other initiatives birthed this year like the Black Romance Podcast produced by Center Director, Dr. Julie Moody-Freeman where I function as sound designer and editor for the podcast.

The pandemic has forced us all to shift, adapt, grow and to thrive this last academic year and I’ve been honored to be a part of the Center’s dynamic staff team during this tumultuous time. I look forward to the continued growth and diversity of initiatives undertaken to provide support to our DePaul community.

Sincerely,

Juelle Daley
Assistant Director of the Center for Black Diaspora
Advisory Board

Cory Barnes, Coordinator - Black Cultural Center

Mr. Barnes joined DePaul University in October 2017 as coordinator of the Black Cultural Center in the Office of Multicultural Student Success. In his role he is the primary resource for information, referrals and advocacy to address the needs of all, while directly supporting Black students. Cory received a BA in sociology and an MS in education in counseling, adult and higher education from Northern Illinois University. He is pursuing a Ph.D. in higher education administration at Illinois State University.

Dani Blackwell, Administrative Assistant - New Student and Family Engagement

Dani Blackwell has been a part of the DePaul family for over 15 years and also an alumna. She joined the board almost 2 years ago and has also served on DPUBLIC, Staff Council as the Chair of the Diversity, Mission and Inclusion committee and the Human Resources committee within the Division of Student Affairs. She is dedicated to the growth of our students and staff at DePaul University.

Mark DeLancey, PhD., Professor - History of Art and Architecture Department

Dana Hall, Associate Professor - Music School

Born in Brooklyn, New York, drummer Dana Hall has been an important musician on the international music scene since 1992. After completing his education in aerospace engineering at Iowa State University, he received his Bachelor of Music degree from William Paterson College in Wayne, New Jersey and, in 1999, his Masters degree in composition and arranging from DePaul University in Chicago, Illinois. He is presently a distinguished Special Trustees Fellow completing his PhD. in ethnomusicology at the University of Chicago.
Valerie Johnson, PhD., Associate Professor - Political Science

Dr. Johnson received her Ph.D. from the University of Maryland, College Park, and is associate professor and chair of the Political Science Department at DePaul University in Chicago. She is the author of Black Power in the Suburbs: The Myth or Reality of African American Suburban Political Incorporation (2002), and co-editor of Power in the City (2008). Her current book project is entitled At the Water’s Edge: The Unfinished Business of Black Equality. Her research and teaching interests include African American politics, urban politics, and education policy.

Amor Kohli, PhD., Associate Professor - African and Black Diaspora Studies

Dr. Kohli is associate professor and director of the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies at DePaul. He received his PhD. in English a Tufts University and taught at Tufts, Middlebury College, and the University of Vermont before coming to DePaul in 2003, the first year of the African and Black Diaspora Studies Department’s existence.

Shiera el Malik, PhD., Associate Professor - International Studies

Dr. el-Malik is an associate professor in the Department of International Studies at DePaul University in Chicago. She teaches and writes on themes of coloniality, politics, and theory. Her research is guided by an interest in the intersection of politics of knowledge and lived experience. Her work is published in the Review of International Studies, African Identities, Journal of Contemporary African Studies, Irish Studies of International Affairs, Critical Studies on Security, African and Black Diaspora, Contexto and Journal of Narrative Politics, amongst other journals and edited volumes. She co-edited with Isaac Kamola Politics of African Anticolonial Archive.

Julie Moody-Freeman, PhD., Associate Professor - African and Black Diaspora Studies

Julie E. Moody-Freeman is an associate professor in African and Black Diaspora Studies. She received her Ph.D. in Literature and Cultural Studies at the University of Illinois at Chicago. Her teaching and research interests include studies in Black Feminist Theory, the Rhetoric of Colonialism and Post-Colonialism, African American popular romance fiction, and Black Speculative fiction.

Ogenga Otunnu, PhD., Associate Professor - History

Dr. Otunnu (PhD, York University) is a professor of History. He teaches the causes and consequences of forced migration in Africa, humanitarian emergencies, comparative genocide, refugee camps and containment, contemporary global issues, African history, comparative slavery, and Africa and Black Diaspora studies. He is the co-founder of the Center for Forced Migration Studies at Northwestern University. He has lectured at the summer program on refugees and forced migration at the Centre for Refugee Studies at York University for 15 years.

Francesca Royster, PhD., Professor - English

Dr. Royster is a professor of English at DePaul University, where she teaches courses in Shakespeare Studies, Performance Studies, Critical Race theory, Gender and Queer Theory and African American Literature. She received her PhD. in English from University of California, Berkeley in 1995. She is the author of Becoming Cleopatra: The Shifting Image of an Icon (Palgrave/MacMillan in 2003) and Sounding Like a No-No: Queer Sounds and Outrageous Acts in the Post-Soul Era (University of Michigan, 2013).

Chernoh Sesay, PhD., Associate Professor - Religious Studies

Dr. Sesay, Jr. is an associate professor in the Religious Studies Department, where in 2018, he received an Excellence in Teaching Award from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. An historian of North American and the Atlantic World, he has authored book chapters and has had articles appear in The New England Quarterly and the Journal of African American Studies. He has also written book reviews for the Journal of American History, the Journal of Africana Religions, and the Journal of Women’s History.

John Zeigler, Director - Egan Office of Urban Education and Community Partnerships

John Zeigler Jr. is director of the Egan Office of Urban Education and Community Partnerships (UECP) and adjunct faculty in Community Service Studies. He provides guidance in the Steans Center’s goal of advancing DePaul faculty and student engagement with public agencies and community-based organizations and schools. John focuses UECP on critical social issues through innovative scholarship, technical assistance and educational programming in schools and communities.

Dexter Zollicoffer, Diversity Advisor - DePaul Theatre School

Mr. Zollicoffer serves as the Diversity Advisor at The Theatre School and is a recipient of the 2013-2012 Spirit of DePaul award. Along with administrative duties, other activities include mentorship to students and supporting the school in graduating young artists who will be prepared and inspired to enter an ever-evolving multi-cultural society. Dexter also partners with other offices at DePaul University that advocate for DePaul’s Diversity mission. He serves as the writer/director for DePaul’s Mile Walker summer acting troupe in partnership with the Office of Diversity Education.
DePaul Diversity Connections Program
Co-organized with the Center for Latino Research

Event Dates: July 31, August 8 2020 and March 12

“When you’re a freshman, it’s all very intimidating. That’s why we wanted to reach out that hand to say, ‘This is a good place for you. We’re going to be here with support and resources,’” says co-faculty sponsor Bill Johnson González, director of the Center for Latino Research and an associate professor of English.

The sessions put a focus on LAS academic programs in the Departments of African and Black Diaspora Studies, Latin American and Latino Studies, and Global Asian Studies, as well as resources from the Office of Multicultural Student Success, CBD and CLR. Incoming students got to meet and hear from current students and faculty. They also saw inspiring short videos from alumni who talked about life after DePaul.

An informative “how to pay for it” session covered everything from financial aid and scholarship opportunities to a personal account of overcoming financial struggles. Breakout sessions gave incoming students a chance to ask questions and mingle. Pre-recorded messages from alumni and faculty were showcased throughout the programs.

“We hope this welcoming gesture may encourage students of color to commit to DePaul by introducing them to important resources such as multicultural student centers and diverse communities of faculty, staff and students who can help them thrive and get the most from their DePaul experience,” says co-faculty sponsor Julie E. Moody-Freeman, director of the Center for Black Diaspora and an associate professor of African and Black diaspora studies.

A similar program was also created for incoming graduate students. “Like undergraduates, graduate students can find it difficult to make connections with other students across disciplines,” says Associate Dean Margaret Storey. “We wanted to create a way to facilitate those connections before classes begin, so that graduate students are given a head start on building the networks that will enrich their time at DePaul.”

-Insights LAS Dean’s Office, Fall 2020

Thanks to the following individuals who made this event possible:

Co-Organizers: Dr. Julie Moody-Freeman and Dr. Billy Gonzalez
LAS Deans, Chairs, and Faculty: Dean Guillermo Vásquez de Velasco; Associate Dean Margaret Storey; Dr. Amor Kohli; Dr. Francesca Boyster; Dr. Chernoh Sesay; Dr. Valerie Johnson; Dr. Mark Delancey; Dr. Christina Rivers; Dr. Carolina Sternberg; Dr. Li Jin; Dr. Laura Kina
Staff: Juelle Daley; Rebecca Hernandez; Michael Riley; Christopher Rone; Yessenia Mejia; Vanessa Martínez
Student and alumni participants: Ashli Funches; Jennifer Gardner; Maici Williams; Mari Oliver; Georgina Quintana; Kekoa Erber; Alyssa Isberto; Karla Velasco; Claudia Peralta; Kevin Quin

Image: Insights LAS Dean’s Office, Fall 2020
The Black Romance Podcast features conversations with Black writers, editors, and scholars of historical and contemporary popular romance fiction. This series builds a rich, complex, multilayered oral history of Black romance that provides insight into Black writers’ cross-generational approaches to representing race, gender, and sexuality, to representing Black history, Black uplift, Black feminism, and to writing romance and Black love.

Guests talk about a range of topics including but not limited to romance publishers’ marginalization of Black writers in the 1970s and 1980s, the founding of the Romance Writers of America, Vivian Stephens’ development and implementation of formula romance at Dell publishing, the advantages and disadvantages of traditional vs self-publishing, the importance of representation in Black queer romance fiction, and the importance of Black representation and owning film rights to books. These intergenerational voices of writers featured in this podcast are beginning to build a much-needed archive on the production and publication of Black Romance.

The Center published eleven episodes with the following guests: Sandra Kitt, Brenda Jackson (two episodes), Beverly Jenkins, Vivian Stephens (two episodes), Alyssa Cole, Rebekah Weatherspoon, Gwyneth Bolton/ Gwendolyn Pough, Rochelle Alers, and Elysabeth Grace/ Margo Hendricks.
Publicity for the Black Romance Podcast

SHELF LOVE

PODCAST

“Dr. Julie Moody-Freeman, host of Black Romance Podcast, uses a multi-modal cultural studies perspective to engage students in critical engagement with Black romance texts to ‘liberate learners from the mimicry of the powerful.’” - Shelf Love

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

“DePaul professor Julie Moody-Freeman creates a podcast examining Black romance novels as scholarship” - Chicago Tribune

DEPAUL DOWNLOAD

FATED MATES

PODCAST

FORBES

Publicity for the Black Romance Podcast

SHELF LOVE

PODCAST

“Dr. Julie Moody-Freeman, host of Black Romance Podcast, uses a multi-modal cultural studies perspective to engage students in critical engagement with Black romance texts to ‘liberate learners from the mimicry of the powerful.’” - Shelf Love

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

“DePaul professor Julie Moody-Freeman creates a podcast examining Black romance novels as scholarship” - Chicago Tribune

DEPAUL DOWNLOAD

FATED MATES

PODCAST

FORBES
Black Romance Podcast Season 2

Episodes 2021

May 11
Donna Hill

May 18
Shirley Hailstock

May 25
Reese Ryan

June 2
LaQuette

June 8
Kennedy Ryan

June 15
Piper Huguley

June 22
Katrina Jackson

June 29
Adriana Herrera

July 6
Celeste Norfleet

Twitter & Instagram: @blk_romance

LaQuette (Pre-order Arr...) - 6/2/21
I’m so honored to be a guest on @blk_romance. It was amazing to be included in the necessary work. Julie Moody-Freeman is doing as she chronicles and explores Black Romance.
Take a listen.
podcasts.apple.com/us/podcast/bla...

Black Romance Podcast - 6/21
Best-selling writer LaQuette
discusses how she came to write and publish romance, her role as the current president of the Romance Writers of America, her publishing

Frederick Smith (he/him) - 5/20/21
The @blk_romance podcast is excellent. All about the Black romance authors who opened up doors in the 80s and 90s for today’s authors. Download & listen.

Elysabeth Grace aka Dr. - 6/15/21
Images of the author and book covers. I love this Podcast. If you have listened, you’re missing some fabulously awesome interviews. @blk_romance

Black Romance Podcast - 6/15/21
Best-selling writer Piper Huguley talks about publishing historical romance with African American Christian characters, novels from her “Home to Milford College Series,” A Virtuous Ruby, Sweet Tea, and By design: The Story of Ann Lowe.
podcasts.apple.com/us/podcast/bla...

Steve Ammidown is takin... - 5/20/21
One of the great things about this episode is Shirley talking about her time working through RWA to end some of Harlequin’s more egregious policies towards authors. This is an important moment in genre history.

Black Romance Podc... - 5/10/21
Best-selling and award-winning novelist Shirley Hallstock joins Julie to talk about her writing & publishing career, and they deep dive into her novels Whispers of Love (Under the Sheets) and Love in Logan Beach.
podcasts.apple.com/us/podcast/bla...

Steve Ammidown is takin... - 5/20/21
Just catching up– this was such a great episode! I’ve said this before, but it’s hard to overstate the importance of this oral history that Dr. Moody-Freeman is compiling. A must-listen!
The Research Fellowship is for an African American graduate student and talented racial justice advocate interested in conducting community-based research on efforts to promote racial equity in Chicago. The research will be focused on one or more of the following areas in partnership with a community organization:

- solutions to police violence targeting Black Lives
- policies that counter systemic racism
- and efforts to positively transform institutions that condone white supremacy.

The Fellow is expected to become a knowledge expert who can contribute to research and practice to advance social change strategies and anti-racism campaigns locally.

---

Laronda Wilson

Laronda is a graduate student pursuing a Master’s of Arts in Public Policy, focused on the intersection of policy and law. Her professional goal is to become a Civil Rights Attorney. She strives to enhance social issues such as poverty, crime, social inequality, employment, education, economic justice, political corruption, and many more. She is a passionate racial justice advocate in the African American community, dedicated to making a change in our economy and society for everyone. She is interested in research focused on solutions to police violence targeting Black Lives, policies that counter systemic racism, and efforts to positively transform institutions that condone white supremacy. She aims to become a knowledgeable expert who can contribute to research and practice to advance social change through strategies and anti-racism campaigns locally.

“The fight is not just being able to keep breathing. The fight is actually to be able to walk down the street with your head held high — and feel like I belong here, or I deserve to be here, or I just have [a] right to have a level of dignity.”

—Alicia Garza, civil rights activist, co-founder of Black Lives Matter movement, 2015

---

Kimberly Fair

Kimberly Fair is a Public Policy graduate student and Winter 2021 Chaddick Scholar. She has a deep passion for economic policy and how it can be used to tackle poverty in the US. Her area of interest is developing policy programs at the state and municipal level to alleviate poverty for distressed black communities. She has a genuine love for helping others and wants to dedicate her life’s work to eliminating poverty. In addition to her academic life, she is a wife, mother, and avid swimmer. Kimberly’s research seeks to evaluate fellowship and mentoring programs success at combating systemic racism through economic mobility and empowerment in 18-30-year-old black men.
Black Diaspora Short Film Festival
Co-Sponsored by The Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies and the Department of International Studies

The Black Diaspora Short Film Festival’s mission is to discover and showcase talented emerging Black filmmakers who tell stories reflecting the diversity and complexity of the Black experience in the United States and around the world. This inaugural virtual festival is sponsored by the Center for Black Diaspora at DePaul University and grown from its extensive film collection of Black Cinema.

In this festival, we seek to reinforce the importance of archiving, watching, and creating black stories. As such, we plan to uplift, promote and nurture the creativity of independent Black filmmakers by providing this forum to exhibit their work in short form cinema. Well-crafted films with poignant stories and themes were selected by jurors. Each film will be followed by a Q & A discussion.

Animation, Feb 25: Gabrielle Tesfaye “My Love, Ethiopia”
Experimental, Mar 4: Baloji “Never Look at the Sun,” Zeke Walker Rainge and Gabby Henderson “Raisin”
Cinematography, Mar 5: Darius Dawson “A Rodeo Film,” Melinda James “Oklahoma is Black,” Josza Anjembe, “Freed”

Contest Jurors: Juelle Daley, Camille Debose, Ramone Hulet, Raphael Nash

Black Diaspora film Distribution Panel, March 11
The panel serves to engage us in a robust dialogue on the state of Black film distribution, barriers to entry and ways to exhibit one’s film. Aymar Jean “AJ” Christian (Associate Professor of Communication studies at Co-Founder of OTV | Open Television) and Romola G. Lucas (founder and executive director of the Caribbean film Academy) will share their wisdom and expertise on Black creatives and spaces where filmmakers can distribute and exhibit their films as well as their respective efforts to do so.
Publicity for the Black Diaspora Short Film Festival

DEPAUL NEWSLINE

THE CULTURAL SERVICES OF THE FRENCH EMBASSY

THE DEPAULIA

Get into the Center For Black Diaspora’s Short Film Festival. The first event in February 25, 2021!!!
This series features young black intellectuals, creatives, and artists on the topic of Black Feminisms.

Sarah Scriven’s talk focused on the life and legacy of Reverend Doctor Pauli Murray through an examination of two events: Murray’s 1935 arrest for picketing the New York Amsterdam News and Murray’s 1940 arrest for defying bus segregation laws in Virginia.

Zakkiyyah Najeebah Dumas-O’Neal’s presentation, a line into infinity, spoke to the trajectory of her work and its exploration of Black women’s cultural contributions and private and public selfhood through photo, found images, video, and text. Most important is how she navigates ways of being and feeling beyond the systems we inhabit as an artist at this time.

Ifejie Akinyele’s talk, #RealBlackGirls: An examination of Hip Hop and Black Womanism, explored the ways in which black feminism theory and Hip Hop intersect, with emphasis on Black Womanism, resistance, and power. Jennifer Gardner talk, If not for the pleasure, then at least for the principle: Championing Pleasure in Contemporary Hip-Hop, delved into how black women explore pleasure and ownership in music.

Maiya Sinclair’s Black Feminist is a feature length documentary film surrounding the double-edged sword of racial and gender oppression that black women face in America. This documentary is told through interviews from scholars, lecturers, writers, business owners, veterans, comedians and authors.
Healing Justice Dialogue Series

Sponsored and organized by the Women’s Center, Peace, Justice and Conflict Studies, The Center for Black Diaspora and The Center for Community Health Equity.

We are in the midst of a health and human rights crisis.

We are outraged and horrified by the murder of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, and countless others whose names must be acknowledged within the long history of racial injustice and police brutality. We stand in solidarity with the Black Lives Matter movement, communities of color, and other communities who are profoundly impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic.

We believe increased dialogue is necessary to assist in the healing many of our communities need amidst the anguish, rage, violence, illness, trauma, and loss they have and continue to experience on so many levels.

Taken from Transformharm.org:

According to Cara Page, Healing Justice is a framework that identifies how we can holistically respond to and intervene on generational trauma and violence and to bring collective practices that can impact and transform the consequences of oppression on our bodies, hearts and minds. Through this framework we continue to build political and philosophical convergences of healing inside of liberation movements and organizations.

Healing Justice means we all deserve to heal on our terms and we confront oppressive systems that get in our way. We honor the trauma and resilience of generations that came before us and use interactive, daily practices that anyone can do. Healing Justice is a reminder to social movements that the concept of action should be expanded to support the self-determination, interdependence, resilience & resistance of those most impacted by oppression. Healing Justice is revolutionary in confronting the capitalist, colonial, individualistic paradigms that tell us we are alone when we seek out healing.

– Young Women’s Empowerment Project and the Chicago Healing Justice Learning Circle

Through the Healing Justice Dialogue Series, we aim to facilitate dialogue within and outside of DePaul that:

- increases our understanding and consciousness around structural racism and violence
- raises our awareness about the historical trauma and oppression communities experience, and how this impacts individual and community wellness
- helps us to learn from the resilience of diverse and indigenous communities
- examines and experiences nontraditional ways of healing
- creates a community of healing and restorative justice
- heightens awareness and community activism

We invite others to contribute to this collaborative initiative and welcome other departments to help identify and co-sponsor speakers. We value the work we can accomplish collectively.

Events

September 30: Healing Justice, Mutual Aid, and Abolitionist Feminism with Tanuja Jagernauth and Sangeetha Ravichandran

November 9: Race, Restorative Justice, and Healing with Fania Davis

February 18: An Evening with African American Zen Priest, Rev angel Kyodo williams

April 30: Circle of Support for LAS Faculty with Sandra Sosa

June 2: Healing Journeys: Turning to Grief in Community with Misty DeBerry

June 22: Restorative Justice in Education with Annalise Buth, Yolineth Sandoval, and Samantha Arechiga

June 29: Circle of Support for LAS Faculty with Sandra Sosa
FALL events 2020

Cultivating Wholeness

Co-Organized by the Center for Black Diaspora

- Healing Justice, Mutual Aid and Abolitionist Feminism [Healing Justice Dialogue Series]
- #Social Bridging: Letter writing as Freedom Work [The Women’s Center]
- Black Feminism and Abolition [The Women’s Center]
Healing Justice, Mutual Aid, and Abolitionist Feminism
With Tanuja Jagernauth and Sangeetha Ravichandran

Sangeetha Ravichandran and Tanuja Jagernauth are healing activists whose work focuses on conflict resolution and transformative justice.

In Healing Justice, Mutual Aid, and Abolition Feminism, Ravichandran and Jagernauth eloquently expressed the importance of transforming oppression to heal the body, heart, and mind. Jagernauth started the conversation by sharing her history of supporting those who struggle with addiction and using theater as an outlet to alleviate injustices. Ravichandran followed – reminding the audience of the significance of story-telling, holding values, and living in the moment. There is much work to be done to figure out what mutual aid and transformative justice look like, but Jagernauth and Ravichandran are present in the struggle, and they are motivating others to do the same.
how institutions perpetuate violence criminalizing survivors of domestic/interpersonal violence. The state (with unconcerned communities) replicates abusive relationships and patterns by taking away control, compounding trauma, and rendering people invisible. They also addressed how lockdowns endanger and isolate people in jail and domestic violence situations. The work of Love & Protect is to dismantle criminal systems, building up the capacity for people to address harm and keep each other safe—especially trans and gender non-conforming folks of color. Caidor and Lewis said that letter writing is the “protect” part of Love & Protect. Letters are community building, allowing people to still feel connected and cared for, and disturb the isolation of prison. Participants could ask and answer questions about domestic violence and were able to give experiences about communicating with incarcerated people. Then, after learning of the transformative power letter writing, everyone contributed to a collective letter to an incarcerated organizer and survivor, Tewkunzi Green.

Members of Love and Protect, Deana Lewis and Rachel Caidor, told us how letter writing can be a powerful practice of abolition and freedom. They first illustrated how institutions perpetuate violence criminalizing survivors of domestic/interpersonal violence. The state (with unconcerned communities) replicates abusive relationships and patterns by taking away control, compounding trauma, and rendering people invisible. They also addressed how lockdowns endanger and isolate people in jail and domestic violence situations. The work of Love & Protect is to dismantle criminal systems, building up the capacity for people to address harm and keep each other safe—especially trans and gender non-conforming folks of color. Caidor and Lewis said that letter writing is the “protect” part of Love & Protect. Letters are community building, allowing people to still feel connected and cared for, and disturb the isolation of prison. Participants could ask and answer questions about domestic violence and were able to give experiences about communicating with incarcerated people. Then, after learning of the transformative power letter writing, everyone contributed to a collective letter to an incarcerated organizer and survivor, Tewkunzi Green.

#Social Bridging: Letter Writing as Freedom Work

1 October 2020 | 4:30-6:00 pm

Co-organized by The Women’s Center

Members of Love and Protect, Deana Lewis and Rachel Caidor, told us how letter writing can be a powerful practice of abolition and freedom. They first illustrated how institutions perpetuate violence criminalizing survivors of domestic/interpersonal violence. The state (with unconcerned communities) replicates abusive relationships and patterns by taking away control, compounding trauma, and rendering people invisible. They also addressed how lockdowns endanger and isolate people in jail and domestic violence situations. The work of Love & Protect is to dismantle criminal systems, building up the capacity for people to address harm and keep each other safe—especially trans and gender non-conforming folks of color. Caidor and Lewis said that letter writing is the “protect” part of Love & Protect. Letters are community building, allowing people to still feel connected and cared for, and disturb the isolation of prison. Participants could ask and answer questions about domestic violence and were able to give experiences about communicating with incarcerated people. Then, after learning of the transformative power letter writing, everyone contributed to a collective letter to an incarcerated organizer and survivor, Tewkunzi Green.

Black Feminism & Abolition

with Rachel Caidor, Mariame Kaba, Deana Lewis, and Beth Richie

21 October 2020 | 6-7:30 pm

Co-organized by Center for Black Diaspora Studies, and the Women’s Center

Co-Sponsored by the Departments of African and Black Diaspora Studies, Critical Ethnic Studies, Peace, Justice, and Conflict Studies, Women’s and Gender Studies, American Studies

Mariame Kaba, Rachel Caidor, Beth Richie, and Deana Lewis discussed how they have been central to organizing in Chicago and beyond. Kaba started the event by welcoming the ancestors to the virtual space. As the guests poured in, the song Lullaby by Tasha played to create a warm atmosphere. Veronica, a guest speaker, amazed people with her spoken word, which demonstrated the importance of ending oppression on Black women’s bodies. Consequently, Kaba, Caidor, Richie, and Lewis clarified the significance of abolition to Black feminism. For them, it is essential to take care of the next generation of Black feminist abolitionists. Questions such as “Who am I fighting for?” and “What drives it?” were used to guide the conversation and reflect on the speakers’ experiences with building abolitionist campaigns to help incarcerated survivors get justice. According to Kaba, “We can’t free ourselves by ourselves.” By loving and caring for one another, we can protect and advocate for those wrongfully incarcerated.

#ByeAnita #LoveandProtect, #FreeBreshaMeadows
Race, Restorative Justice, and Healing

with Fania Davis

9 November 2020 | 6-7 pm CT

“Restorative justice is a healing justice, rather than a harming justice.”

She used the recent 2020 election results (and our mixed reactions of skepticism and relief) to analyze the divisions in our country. She asserted that individuals, elected politicians, and parties cannot amend white supremacy, genocide, or racial capitalism. Rather, LGBTQIA, environmental justice, restorative justice, and racial justice movements will bring about new futures.

Radical systemic issues must be met with radical systemic solutions. Institutions can become healing, empathetic, and conscious when they share power with communities, give ownership and leadership to communities, instead of replicating hierarchal dominating structures. Finally, Davis said that healing starts with hyper-awareness, dismantling internal carceral systems, and transforming the self to transform the world.

"Let's always celebrate our victories. But this is no time to rest. The work of organizing must continue."

"We need to be both warriors and healers. It’s important for us to heal ourselves, families, communities, as well as fight with all we have against systems of oppression."

7:19 PM · Nov 9, 2020 · Twitter Web App
FALL events 2020

Cultivating Wholeness

Co-sponsored by the Center of Black Diaspora

- Otto Frank
- The Latinx Vote in 2020: Getting Out the Vote
- Reparations and Reconciliation: Lessons for the U.S. from Post–Apartheid South Africa
- A Conversation with Jaquira Diaz, author of Ordinary Girls
Roger Guenveur Smith performed a brilliant monologue. Smith opened his captivating performance sitting at a rough-hewn table moving only his head and soundbox. His narrative of the brutal experiences the Frank’s faced at the hands of Nazis was interwoven with images of oppression face by immigrants of all races, Blacks in the United States, and Jewish peoples. He captivated audiences through blending narratives of horrific events from the past and present with the recognition that comes with the acknowledgment that we didn’t imagine these things. Marc Anthony Thompson’s sound and lighting design took this performance to another level. He used subtle and harsh sound and lighting that only someone with both gifted artistic and technological expertise can use to elicit feelings of recognition, horror, sadness, and empowerment all at once.

“Rodney King introduced me to Otto Frank. I was invited to perform Rodney King in Amsterdam and it was there that I was able to visit the Anne Frank House. I imagined her father there, after the war, having lost his wife and their two daughters. In silence. And resolve. As my anonymous narrator had pursued an impossible conversation with Rodney King, my Otto Frank, the custodian of his daughter’s legacy, speaks to her from far beyond her time and his own, interrogating the crisis of our present moment from a not-so-distant past,” says Roger Guenveur Smith. “I’m excited to perform Otto Frank virtually as it allows us to reach a wider audience and safely. I’m grateful for the support from DePaul Center for Black Diaspora & Jewish Life and to be working with DePaul University.”

-Broadway World
The Latinx Vote in 2020: Getting Out the Vote

1 October, 2020|4:30-5:30 PM

Hosted by The Center for Latino Research, the Departments of Political Science, Latin American and Latino Studies, African and Black Diaspora Studies, and History, and the Critical Ethnic Studies Program

This panel was the first installment of The Latino Vote in 2020, a two-part symposium dedicated to the significance of Latinxs on the Presidential Election on November 3rd.

The conversation between political scientist Melissa R. Michelson, LULAC Iowa State Director Nick Salazar, and DePaul professor Joe R. Tafoya (Political Science, Latin American and Latino Studies) explored the importance of Latino voting, best practices on getting Latinxs out to vote, and opportunities in the Midwest.

Reparations and Reconciliation: Lessons for the U.S. from Post-Apartheid South Africa

15 October, 2020|5 PM

Presented by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies
Co-sponsored by the Center for Black Diaspora

Academic discussion by the newest Ida B. Wells-Barnett Postdoctoral fellow at DePaul, Dr. Martin L. Boston. The restorative-justice public hearings of The Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) aided the fall of apartheid in South Africa. The hearings allowed for victims of apartheid to give statements about their experiences on record. Perpetrators of the violence of apartheid to gave testimonies of their wrongdoing and requested amnesty from both criminal and civil prosecution. The Black majority of the country continues to face wealth gaps and education disparities, but South Africa’s confrontation with its racist past could serve as an example of restorative justice for the United States. As we are challenging anti-Blackness in institutions and corporations, the TRC provides an important model for us to consider the differences between self-interested statements of solidarity and systemic repair.

(Information from Eventbrite)
A Conversation with Jaquira Diaz, author of Ordinary Girls

27 October 2020 | 12-1 pm

Author Erika L. Sanchez interviewed Jaquira Diaz, author of memoir Ordinary Girls. Diaz first read an excerpt from her book, and then answered questions. She discussed how she was able to take care of herself while revisiting difficult moments of her memoir. Diaz wrote the book for her teenage self, because she realized how important it was to see herself in books. The memoir was a way of making sense of her past while looking towards the future and realizing how stigmatized elements of her girlhood (her struggles with depression, violence, and queerness) connected to her womanhood. She thinks of her memoir as a conversation about systems of oppression, a conversation which includes the stories of Latina, queer, women of color in American Literature. Ordinary Girls shows how joy and violence live together in the world. Diaz believes a lot of incredible writers will result from this tumultuous time period.
WINTER 2021

Cultivating Wholeness

Presented, Co-Organized, and Co-Sponsored by the Center for Black Diaspora

- A Conversation with artists Katie Chung & Unyimeabasi Udoh
- An Evening with rev angel Kyodo williams [Healing Justice Dialogue Series]
- Transnational Feminist Genealogies: Revisiting This Bridge Called My Back [Women and Gender Studies and The Women Center]
- Black Diaspora Short Film Festival
A Conversation with artists Katie Chung & Unyimeabasi Udoh

with Chicago Artists Coalition, Juelle Daley, and Richard “Dingo” Dingwall

13 January 2021 | 5:30-7:00 PM CT

Chung and Udoh’s works are in the show, "Excavating Memory" at the Chicago Artist Coalition and curated by Juelle Daley. The event featured poet Richard "Dingo" Dingwall, author of A Window to Let the Light Out."

“Excavating Memory” is a journey into the world of archiving, memorializing and reclaiming cultural erasure. Using photography, drawing, sculptural objects and mix-media installations, Katie Chung and Unyimeabasi Udoh resurrect memories that communicate the subtleties and multiple layers of self with the freeing statement, “I define me.”

Throughout the evening, the artists discussed how they grappled with their unseen and disconnected histories. They expressed through their art a reverence for the past, and a shared sense of loss or separation from their lineages and countries. They also discussed the role of museums, the presentation of art, in their identities and cultural histories. Dingwall performed poetry related to the themes of the artists’ work, making a point about official history and memory, official language, and “unofficial” Jamaican patois.
An Evening with African American Zen Priest, Rev angel Kyodo williams

18 February 2021 | 6:00-7:00 PM CST

Co-organized with the Women’s Center, Center for Community Health Equity, Peace Justice and Conflict Studies

angel Kyodo williams is an author, activist, master trainer and founder of Transformative Change. They have been bridging the worlds of transformation and justice since their critically-acclaimed book, Being Black: Zen and the Art of Living With Fearlessness and Grace was hailed as “an act of love” by Pulitzer Prize winner Alice Walker, and "a classic" by Buddhist pioneer Jack Kornfield.

These days, almost all of their time is devoted to advancing the work ignited by their co-authored book, Radical Dharma: Talking Race, Love & Liberation: to have the conversations necessary to become more awake and aware of what hinders liberation of self and society. The Connections, Circles and Conversations that have emerged from Radical Dharma confront head on the most formidable and critical impediment to justice and social transformation of our time. They have initiated profound healing and deepened commitment to dismantling oppression across lines of race, class, sexual orientation and other divides.

Their work has been widely covered by such publications as New York Times, Boston Globe, Ms., Essence, Buddhadharma, and on On Being with Krista Tippett.
Black Diaspora Short Film Festival

Co-sponsored by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies and the Department of International Studies

25 February – 11 March 2021
During this event, commemorating 40 years of the publication of the ground-breaking book This Bridge Called My Back edited by Cherrie Moraga and Gloria Anzaldua, we envision discussing its continuing influence in today’s transnational world. We hope to trace the historical genealogies and ongoing progression of Transnational Feminism in connection with US women of color and Third World Feminisms.

The event began with a conversation between Cherrie Moraga and Lourdes Torres where they reflected on the origins and history of This Bridge. It transitioned to a conversation with Cherrie Moraga, Margo Okazawa Rey, and others, around the historical genealogies and ongoing progression of Transnational Feminism.

In the preface to the fourth edition, Moraga writes “The Egyptian Revolution is my revolution” (xvi) and talks about being inspired by the women protesting in Tahrir Square. Neoliberal globalization and attendant new technology-enabled social media have brought the proximity of “foreign” nations much closer. Moraga states that “Bridge’s original political conception of US women of color...has now evolved into a transnational and increasingly complex movement of women today, whose origins reside in Asia, throughout the global south, and in indigenous North America” (xvi).

In this event, we explored how insights from This Bridge offer valuable frames of reference and modes of analysis to build solidarity around issues of gender and racial justice across/in-between borders—how can we build bridges across “all barriers of state-imposed nationality?” In turn, how can contemporary struggles and transnational movements challenging economic inequalities, neocolonial wars, xenophobia, transphobia, immigration and border policing, sexual and racial violence, prison and carceral systems led by marginalized communities within the US and around the world inspire a re-reading and re-engagement with This Bridge? What are the continuities and disjunctures between intergenerational feminist struggles, what are the shared and distinct challenges amongst marginalized and dispossessed communities across the globe and how can we learn from each other to truly build a feminism without borders?
SPRING 2021 events
Cultivating Wholeness

Presented and Co-Organized by the Center for Black Diaspora

- The Arrests of Pauli Murray by Sarah Scriven, Graduate Student, The Harriet Tubman Department of Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies, University of Maryland
- An Evening with artists, Zakkiyyah Najeebah Dumas-O’neal, with a talk on a line into infinity
- Being Black and Queer: Challenging Misconceptions and Making Room
- A Conversation with Ifejie Akinyela (#RealBlackGirls: An examination of Hip Hop and Black Womanism) & Jennifer Gardner (If not for the pleasure, then at least for the principle: Championing Pleasure in Contemporary Hip-Hop)
- Film Screening of the documentary, Black Feminist and discussion and its Relevance to Theory, Culture and Art with Maiya Sinclair
- Our Muses: Art and the Family Archive with Ellen Holtzblatt, Kalen Na'il Roach and Juan Molina Hernandez
- Circle of Support for LAS Faculty with Sandra Sosa
A Conversation with Sarah Scriven: Arrests of Pauli Murray
Co-organized by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies and the Women’s Center

20 April 2021 | 6 PM CST

Emerging Scholars/Creatives Series:
Black Feminisms

Zakkiyyah Najeebah Dumas-O’neal

Zakkiyyah’s presentation, “a line into infinity” will speak to the trajectory of her work and its exploration of Black women’s cultural contributions and private and public selfhood through photo, found images, video, and text. The artist will also share how she navigates ways of being and feeling beyond the systems we inhabit as an artist at this time.

Zakkiyyah Najeebah Dumas-O’neal

The talk will focus on the life and legacy of Reverend Doctor Pauli Murray through an examination of two events: Murray’s 1935 arrest for picketing the New York Amsterdam News and Murray’s 1940 arrest for defying bus segregation laws in Virginia.

6 May 2021 | 6 PM CST
Being Black and Queer: Challenging Misconceptions and Making Room

Thursday, May 13th, 2021
6 PM-7:30 PM

Affinity is a nonprofit organization established in 1995 that focuses on the Black LGBTQ community. This conversation will be centered around community organizing, Black Queer identity, and transformative justice.

Co-organized by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies and the LGBTQIA+ Resource Center

13 May 2021 | 6-7:30 PM CST

A Conversation with Ifejie Akinyela & Jennifer Gardner

May 18th, 2021 06:00 PM Central Time

Jennifer Gardner: “If not for the pleasure, then at least for the principle.” Championing Pleasure in Contemporary Hip-Hop” will use an Afrocentric perspective to examine African traditional aesthetics that demonstrates a particular socio-cultural orientation to musical campaigns connected to the Black women physique, relationships, and art that center joy, satisfaction and excitement.

Register via Eventbrite:

Center for Black Diaspora and the Women’s Center

Co-organized by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies and the Center for Black Diaspora and the Women’s Center

18 May 2021 | 6 PM CST
A Discussion of the Film Black Feminist and its Relevance to Theory, Culture and Art with Maiya Sinclair

Maiya Sinclair is a filmmaker, scholar, and speaker based out of Chicago, IL. She is currently working on her Master's in Critical Ethnic Studies, Public Policy and Women and Gendered Studies at DePaul University.

Maiya will share and discuss some of the poignant moments from the film. She will share her experience as a filmmaker and artist, talk about Black feminist filmmaking, and Black feminist aesthetics.

Tuesday, May 25, 2021
6 PM (Central Time)

Co-sponsored by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies and the Department of International Studies

25 May 2021 | 6 PM CST

Our Muses: Art and the Family Archive with Ellen Holtzblatt, Kalen Na'il Roach and Juan Molina Hernandez

Join us for a conversation with Hatch artists, Ellen Holtzblatt, Juan Molina Hernandez and invited artist Kalen Roach for a discussion on mining the family archive in their art practice. This event is also affiliated with the current exhibit, Translucent Beauty and Other Guardians on view at the Chicago Artist Coalition until June 16, 2021.

JUNE 3, 2021 at 6:00 PM CST

Moderator: Juelle Daley, Asst. Director and Independent Curator
Register to obtain Zoom link: https://www.eventbrite.com/e/our-muses-art-and-the-family-archive-tickets-158854888414
Dear LAS Faculty Colleagues,

We invite you to a space to connect and provide support to one another.

Please join us for a

CIRCLE of SUPPORT

Friday, April 30th
10:30 am - 12:30 pm CST via zoom

Facilitated by Sandra Sosa, a member of the Social Justice and Well-Being Team with the W. Haywood Burns Institute.

https://burnsinstitute.org/staff/sandra-sosa/

Register in advance for this meeting:
https://depaul.zoom.us/meeting/register/tJUaCuyrTz8r6Gf
9NhTGe88B8tZjunnPb96c

After registering, you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the meeting. Please note that we need to place a cap on the number of registrants. We hope to offer this space again.

We hope you will join us!

Circle of Support for LAS Faculty with Sandra Sosa

Co-sponsored by Women’s Center, Peace, Justice, and Conflict Studies, the Center for Black Diaspora, the Center for Community Health Equity, The Egan Office of Urban Education and Community Partnerships

30 April and 29 June 2021 | 10:30 AM and 4 PM CST
SPRING 2021

Cultivating Wholeness

Co-Sponsored by the Center for Black Diaspora

- BlackSpace Manifesto in Action
- In Search of the Color Purple by Salamishah Tillet
- Stop the Violence: Pathways to Justice and Police Accountability in Chicago Communities of Color
- Making the World More Bearable: A reading and conversation with poet Danez Smith
- Black Twitter: Geographies of Care and Resistance
- Healing Journeys: Turning to Grief in Community
BlackSpace Manifesto in Action
Presented by the Department of International Studies
Co-sponsored by the Departments of African and Black Diaspora Studies, Geography, and Political Science
7 April 2021 | 4:20 PM CST

In Search of the Color Purple
by Salamishah Tillet
Co-sponsored by the Department of English, the Women’s Center, the Center for Black Diaspora, the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies
14 April 2021 | 6-7 PM CST
Stop the Violence: Pathways to Justice and Police Accountability in Chicago Communities of Color

5 May 2021 | 5 PM–6:30 PM CST

Making the World More Bearable: A reading and conversation with poet Danez Smith

Presented by LGBTQ Studies Program and the Department of English

Co-sponsored by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies, The Women’s Center, Critical Ethnic Studies, American Studies, The Center for Black Diaspora, MFA/MA in Creative Writing and Publishing, LGBTQIA+ Resource Center, Women and Gender Studies, LGBTQ Faculty and Staff Network, and Center for Latino Research

19 May 2021 | 3 PM-4 PM CST
Black Twitter: Geographies of Care and Resistance
Co-sponsored by the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies, The Center for Black Diaspora, the Department of International Studies, the Department Geography
19 May 2021 | 4:20 PM CST

Healing Journeys: Turning to Grief in Community with Misty De Berry
Co-sponsored by the Healing Justice Dialogue Series organizers (Center for Black Diaspora, Center for Community Health Equity, Peace Justice and Conflict Studies Program, and the Women’s Center).
2 June 2021 | 6 PM CST
Restorative Justice in Education with Annalise Buth, Yolineth Sandoval, and Samantha Arechiga
Co-sponsored by Healing Justice Dialogue Series
22 June 2021 | 4:30 PM CST

PLEASE SAVE THE DATE
TUESDAY, JUNE 22, 2021 FROM 4:30-6PM
PART OF THE HEALING JUSTICE SERIES

Restorative Justice in Higher Education

How can we use restorative justice as a tool to transform our universities and the way we see and understand the world?

Speakers: Annalise Buth, Center on Negotiation and Mediation, Northwestern Pritzker School of Law. And a visitor from the Circles & Ciphers collective.

How are we practicing restorative justice inside and outside the classroom?

Speakers: PAX Graduate Yolilbeth Sandoval and Current PAX Student Samantha Arechiga

Tickets at RJinHigherEd.eventbrite.com
The Reading Room in our center is an immensely valuable resource, housing over 2500 books, 250 films, and music, on Black experiences, art, cultures, politics, scholarship, and ideas. Our collection is commonly visited by campus tours, and incoming-students looking for access to the Black DePaul community. Many of our books are not found in other DePaul libraries, which makes the collection a unique aid for faculty and students.

Since its inception, the Reading Room is ever-growing and is welcoming to new written and artistic works which are displayed on the walls.

The space is open for studying, film watching, or relaxing, and can be reserved for meetings, presentations, and small events.*

The Reading Room is always available online through our catalogue. Our catalog can be accessed at https://www.librarycat.org/lib/CBDDPU

To reserve the space, please contact the Center staff. The Reading Room is open from 9:30am-5:00pm, Mondays through Fridays. Extended hours may be arranged by request.