What is at the root of hunger in much of the world? Global food policies are part of the problem as are long-standing internal challenges within many countries. But there are solutions, if governments made fighting hunger a priority which many don't. Chris

Herlinger, author of Food Fight: Struggling for Justice in a Hungry World, discusses Haiti and South Sudan as two examples of countries facing these dire food challenges.

Chris Herlinger is also an international correspondent for the National Catholic Reporter's Global Sisters Report, covering the United Nations and humanitarian challenges in South Sudan, Bangladesh, Haiti, and the Middle East.
