About

Rachel has an undergraduate degree in history and experience working in the nonprofit child advocacy and family services sector. She is completing an MPP at DePaul. She is interested in research concerning data, legislation, and regulation and how these interlocking pieces can be mobilized to create a thriving and just society. She is spending the summer of 2023 studying affordable housing in the northern suburbs.

Notable memory

When we almost missed the train coming back from Milwaukee because the group was so enthralled with one of the city's new double-decker buses!
