The Year of

Lovely

FILTH

Wednesday, October 17, 2018 • 7–9 pm
DePaul Student Center, 120
2250 N. Sheffield Avenue, Chicago

In this year of the 200th anniversary of “Frankenstein,” we will be looking at the ways in which something mainstream culture might regard as bad, dirty, grotesque, or generally unworthy actually deserves celebration. From feminist epistemology and “manufactured uncertainty,” to the challenges (as well as rewards) of being gay and aging, to the role of spoilage in making delicious cheese, the DHC kicks off its “Year of Filth” series with a night of lectures, performances, and a free exotic cheese tasting for the first 100 audience members in attendance!

Featuring:

Lorraine Code, Distinguished Research Professor Emerita in Philosophy, York University, Toronto

Dustin Goltz, DHC Fellow, Professor, College of Communication, DePaul University

Liz Thorpe, author of The Book of Cheese

If you require an ASL interpreter and know you will be attending, please contact the DHC at least two weeks before the event date.

This event is free and open to the public. Discounted parking available; see DHC staff for details.
