The preeminent figure painter of our time, John Currin is an artist who makes oil paintings that confront our assumptions about beauty, sexuality, art, and culture with unrivaled technique, talent, humor, humility, and intelligence. Currin comes to the DePaul Humanities Center to deliver the annual “Future of the Arts & Humanities Lecture,” to receive the 2015-16 Humanities Laureate Award, and to have an on-stage discussion about his work and the meaning of art.
